NEWARK, Del. (November 15, 2021) — The International Literacy Association (ILA) announced today that it is accepting applications from editor teams interested in taking the helm of Reading Research Quarterly (RRQ), the literacy field's premier, peer-reviewed research journal.

Forward-thinking scholars and recognized experts in the field of literacy education are invited to apply as teams of two to five people. As part of the editor search, ILA has implemented some significant changes to past editorship models. These include

- Shorter terms of service (four years vs. six)

In addition, the impact factor score for RRQ has increased from 1.6 to 4.3 in the last five years.

The prestigious editorship is for a term of four years (July 1, 2022–June 30, 2026), the first of which overlaps with the current editors' term. The deadline to apply is Monday, January 10, 2022. For more information, please visit ILA's journal website.
